In today's rapidly evolving information age, much attention is paid to the education of the younger generation. All subjects and textbooks are being thoroughly analyzed and improved in a modern way.

In order to fulfill this great task, I think we must thoroughly study our national traditions, the secrets of our national language, the Uzbek language. To do this, we must use the world-recognized modern methods of teaching the Uzbek language in preschool, secondary and higher education. Today, such programs provide a variety of methodological and scientific approaches to teaching. In order to organize a modern education system, first of all, the use of interactive methods, which are widely used today, in the teaching process has a special place. So what is the interactive method?

The term "interactive" is expressed in English as "interactive" (- "interactive" in Russian), - From a lexical point of view, "inter" means "continuous, two-sided," "act" means to act, to act. Interactive education is education based on the organization of a joint, collaborative movement for the acquisition of knowledge, skills, competencies and certain moral qualities of the participants in the learning process.

In the education system, based on such methods, an open dialogue between teacher and student begins. In our traditional education system, the "teacher-informant" is the "student-information recipient." The main purpose of a traditional lesson is for the teacher to convey and explain the main content, concepts and arguments of the lesson topic to the students.

-As you know, there are several stages to a traditional lesson.

-Organizational part

-Ready to repeat the past and start a new topic

-Coverage of a new topic

-Strengthen the new theme

-Summarize and evaluate the lesson

-Homework

This can make it difficult for the child to think independently. Traditional teaching is generally considered to be a passive teaching method. However, whether students are active or inactive in a lesson depends on how the lesson is conducted and planned. It is recommended that the new material be broken into smaller pieces to increase the effectiveness of the traditional lesson and increase student engagement in the lesson. In interactive learning and games, the student is able to think as a group, to express their ideas in front of the group independently, without interruption, to think independently and creatively. The interactive method of education, the use of which in the classroom, encourages each student to make independent decisions and think freely.

DISCUSSION METHOD

The method is an oral discussion organized by two or more people at certain time intervals and according to strict rules, and serves to develop students' ability to express freely, reasoned opinions on the topic being studied does. The use of discussion in the training sessions addresses specific issues on the topic.

When using the method, the work is done in the following order:

The topic chosen for the discussion will be announced to the students in advance.

The process is led by a teacher (or beginner).

Students (students) are individual, on behalf of the group (pair) individually on the issue under discussion explains the review

In the debate, conflicting filters are put forward on the essence of the problem, the solution Students who explain the main idea of the solution are given 10 minutes, and those who want to add - 5 minutes. The teacher (beginner) announces the final conclusion of the discussion One of the advantages of this method is that each student is given the opportunity to comment once. Through this method, students who are inactive in the classroom are able to think and express themselves independently in front of the group.
