ABSTRACT:

Today we come across to the task of forming a new generation that combines the most advanced achievements of the world science and culture, enjoying the riches created by the human intellect. Only on this basis the intellectual force that enables the nation to strive for development can be created.

KEYWORDS: 21st century trafficking on humans, world culture today, world information space, youngsters keeping pace with the period, spiritual threat.

THE MAINBODY:

There are mass of things to talk right now about the spiritual threat. Every citizen of mankind receives hundreds and even thousands of unsorted information a day. Most of them have the ideas that infuse the ideas of individualism and selfishness. The beauty of the body, the expressions of appearance, the expression of superficial, and such a poor feelings are entering our lives through the songs we listen, the internet, the T.V, and mobile phones. Now it is impossible not to face the in any situation. In the beginning of the XXI century, the process of globalization in the world has become so intense that, there was no any nation is fully protected from it. In today's information age, the internet is increasingly encircling the world. There are more than 2billion users of this system on earth. Unfortunately, a significant part of the information in this network serves to mislead young people, and social networks are becoming the main tool. Today "Trafficking on humans" is one of the global problems of the spiritual threat in the world. In the process of using the internet, many young people are enslaved by the deceptions of organized crime groups involved in human trafficking.

Today we have the task of forming a new generation that will embody the most advanced achievements of world science and culture, enjoy the riches created by the human intellect. Only on this basis, the intellectual force that enables the nation to strive for development can be created.

Our first president I. A . Karimov says in his book named "High spirituality is an invincible force" "Today, our young people receive a variety of information not only in schools, but also through the radio, television, press and on the internet. In such an environment, where the world information space is expanding, it is undoubtedly in line with the requirements of the time and our noble goals to educate our children in a one – sided way, not just to wrap their minds around it, not to read it, not to see it. Furthermore it is not also suitable for our future goals".

Our young generation, who are equalto the period, remain obedient, courageous, kind, simple and trustworthy in the heart of an Uzbek child, because of these the highest qualities of a true Uzbek. In this situation , it is expedient to program the President`s words " With information against the information" against the information threat and to provide our students with legal knowledge on Human Trafficking and fight against it in the educational process.the 37th point of the Constitution of the Republic of the Uzbekistan, which is the main legal basis for the state and social reform, strengthens the basic labor rights of man and citizens , which fully comply with the requirements of point 23 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

It states that everyone has the right to work, to free choice of employment, to just and favorable conditions of work and to protection against unemployment in accordance with the law. A person involved in human trafficking aggresses by opposing the victims in exercising their rights and freedoms enshrined in the Constitution and laws. Such criminals force people to rape physically, mentally and sexually, hold them by force, and violate their right to sexual freedom. A person's safety and healthy lifestyle are neglected, and working conditions are not provided. The thing that makes us sad is there are mass of individuals who have fallen into their hands in various ways, all of whom embezzle their wages , earn a wax income , threat the victims inhumane and cruelty , openly exploit and sell them through the forced labor.

The level of international social risk of crimes related to human trafficking and its negative consequence is one of the most extremely dangerous and urgent problems of today's period.

International migration has become a well - organized, diversified international business, along with the official government circles, informal organizations such as organized criminalistics groups, radical organizations, and religious sects are also interested in the intensification of migration processes, and in the content of globalization. This business has a huge budget and thereby, it controls hundreds of and even thousands of jobs and people, as well as a network of many organizations and institutions.

According to the United Nations, the organized crime groups get profit through human trafficking account for 3.5 billion dollars a year. According to an analysis in the journal of Economist, the revenue generated by clandestine structures from the smuggling of illegal migrants is estimated at 5-7 billion dollars a year.

Another aspects of this issue is that, the population of the countries receiving the migrants is increasingly concerned about them. This is due to the reduction of jobs at the expense of migrants, the increasement in crime, a number of cultural, ethnic, religious and political differences. As a result, there are a number of conflicts in most country.in Sweden, France, Italy, Spain, Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland,and a number of eastern European countries, the anti - immigrant protests have taken place. Naturally, this situation also affects interstate relations.

Migration problems cannot be solved by applying a simple restraining mechanism. This requires minimizing the economic gap between developed and developing countries, effective use of efforts of all countries in investing in the economies of developing countries, the education system, new medicine and information technology.

Researchers estimated that, nowadays, more than 190 million people live in countries other than where they were born and grew up.

According to the United Nations and the International Labor Organization, only legal migrants account for between 120 million and 200 million worldwide. Of the 98 major countries involved in the international labor exchange process, 31 are exporters, 43 are recipients, and 24 are both senders and recipients.

CONCLUSION:

The human trafficking is a modern form of slavery, a new form of slave trade. The perpetrators are primarily luring women and children into the trap of forced labor and sexual slavery. Traffickers use force, fraud, coercion, and other criminal ways to take vulnerable, poor and depressed people to other parts of the world.

There is no homeland outside the homeland, and therefore while living in this country, we must not allow our children to fall victim to someone's goals, to fall into the scourge of slavery, to carry the destructive ideas of others as a consequence of spiritual poverty. As our first president I. A. Karimov noted : “ the ultimate goal of all economic , democratic , and political reforms is , first of all , the creation of decent living and working conditions for human beings.
