Annotation: The article focuses on the education of today's young generation, the formation of a scientific worldview in them by raising the culture of reading. There is also a culture of reading in the development of the moral requirements of the peoples of the East, such as morality, decency, courtesy, respect for parents, teachers, politeness, openness, restraint, humility, commitment, honesty and so on. The importance of reading issues is analyzed in detail.

Keywords: scientific worldview, book, reading culture, book reading, high moral principles, intellectual potential.

The peculiarities of modern social development, the development of social consciousness and the deeper penetration of humanity into the mysteries of the world are determined by the priority of intellectual potential inherent in the XXI century.

Man realizes his direct existence, his existence, in constant contact with the world around him. In order to live in the world and to adapt optimally, man, his intellect and senses are directed to the outside, that is, to know the world. This is because a person's mastery of the world depends primarily on solving the problems associated with studying it. Accordingly, the natural, historical, and social aspects of the human cognitive process are highlighted. The purpose and task of goal-seeking is to discover the truth by revealing their deep, stable, defining aspects and aspects, their essence, through the study of various phenomena. In this process, the promotion of a culture of reading plays an important role.

It should be noted that the book is the sun. When the sun warms the earth, Mother Nature, the book warms the human heart, not only warms, but also illuminates, illuminates. While it is permissible to give the shortest description of a book, it is appropriate to describe it as the sun of spirituality.

It is well known that man is interested in things that suit his nature, character, and psyche. Someone is interested in history books, someone reads philosophical novels, someone likes adventure works, and someone is passionate about comics. Another person will be a martyr of poetry. The periodicity of the books is also important to them. For example, fans of classical, traditional and modern literature can be found. It is also possible to determine a person's goals and aspirations, character, and mood by looking at the book he is reading. In this sense, it is possible to recommend him to read a book, taking into account these interests.

What is the level of reading in today's people after reading the article of the well-known scientist Olimjon Davlatov "The culture of reading - a criterion of spiritual growth" in the 5th issue of the newspaper "Milliy Tiklanish" in 2017 ?!

Is it possible to imagine our future life without reading a book? urges to look for answers to the questions.

The article provides a detailed analysis of the problems of the system of printing and distribution of book products, in the field of publishing, the promotion and promotion of the culture of reading and reading.

The author laments: "Every organization has a spiritual room. Comfortable rooms, patgilams, TV, computer, pulpit ... But even in this place there are a few books or not. These rooms often open on Monday mornings and are locked in their mouths until the end of the week. In fact, isn't the book a twin concept with spirituality?"[1]

The book is a tool that connects centuries to centuries, times to times, links to links. "A house without books is like ignorance," said a wise man. The article quoted above states, "It should come as no surprise that a teenager growing up in a family without a library at home will later become interested in books that encourage different currents. Because he does not have the skills to read, no one has given him a book, he cannot distinguish between good and bad."[2]

Take, for example, two individuals, one raised in a family with a healthy spiritual environment and the other in a home where there are constant conflicts and wars between the couple. By itself, the child of the first family enjoys being in the circle of family members, following the advice of their parents. The other analyzes the family environment and feels like an unnecessary "rag". Undoubtedly, such children seek love, attention from strangers and seek the street. He spends his free time not with education, but with "friends" on various social sites. He easily follows those who "kind" to him through social media. As a result, he becomes a living weapon of the wicked, a manatee, and does not spare his life in the way of carrying out the task assigned to him. Because the feeling of uselessness in the real world, which had formed in his mind, was replaced by the feeling of "need" in the virtual world. Unfortunately, if we do not eliminate the unhealthy environment in the family, the environment in society will continue to be unhealthy in this way.

In ancient times, the works of Alisher Navoi, Mirzo Bedil, Boborahim Mashrab and other poets were read with interest in the homes of our ancestors. Their children participated in reading circles. As a result, they became interested in reading books.

N.Xanikov, who got acquainted with the activities of Bukhara madrasas in the middle of the XIX century, testified that in order to complete a full course of madrassas, a student of science (ie, a person with a higher education) had to read about 137 books. In our opinion, the main purpose of this relationship is to promote a culture of reading and to inspire people to love books. [3]

It is noteworthy that it is a concept that expresses certain regulated norms by the peoples of the East in relation to man, nature, religion and the world, material and cultural blessings, mental and physical feelings. Behavior, conduct, upbringing, kindness, courtesy, respect for parents, teachers, politeness, openness, restraint, humility, commitment, honesty and so on are clearly reflected in the culture of various peoples of the East. led to the formation of the concept of Eastern morality in the Western world. Experts who study the history of the peoples of the East from different angles also note that the issue of morality in the East has long been given great attention, and the results achieved in this area over the centuries have greatly contributed to the development of all mankind.

From time immemorial, the issue of developing and applying high moral principles has played an important role in the mentality of the peoples of the East. As a result of these ethical principles passing the test of time, they took on the appearance of moral rules and later began to play an important role in shaping the moral qualities of these people.

In the culture of the peoples of the East, although there is diversity, there is unity in the rules of ethics. This means that a person followed a code of ethics that had a single meaning, regardless of where he lived in the East, what religion he believed in, and what language he spoke.

The Eastern Code of Ethics is an important program in the spiritual and moral upbringing of today's generation. Because one of the priorities of the democratic policy of our state is to bring up a comprehensively developed and harmoniously developed person.

In particular, the book "Avesto", which is considered to be our ancient spiritual heritage, describes the teachers who educate young people as follows: infects students from wise teachers, remains a monument. The Almighty God praises teachers who are faithful to their knowledge and profession, who are distinguished by their eloquence, diligence, responsibility and devotion, who have broken the teachings of Zoroaster. [4]

While the process of forming a new scientific worldview remains the basis of ideological education, one of the main tasks of reading culture is to form ideological beliefs and ideological stability by clearly stating the national psyche, historical roots and scientific sources. The end result is that the culture of reading becomes a life program for everyone. As a result, the inner state of mind in a person - impression and feeling - awakens a sense of excitement, satisfaction and enjoyment, revives the ability to be creative and creative. Thus, as we have noted above, the copy copied from the essence of existence leads to the socialization, the humanization of nature. In the process of these processes, the imagination and understanding of each of us, our abilities and talents, knowledge and skills lead in all our actions. It is with such spiritual power that we discover our own world. This discovery allows each of us to prioritize our "I" and realize ourselves. Thus, in the system of "World and Self" a person's attitude, attitude, chosen path, decisions are made in relation to the world of things and events that surround him. [5]

Reading enriches our spiritual world, enhances our speaking culture. In some cases, it is necessary to read a book in order to prevent some of our compatriots in the sacred Uzbek language from becoming rude and impoverished due to "service". However, our Uzbek language is one of the richest languages in the world. While A.S. Pushkin used a total of 21,197 words throughout his career, the language of Shakespeare's works used more than 20,000 words in total. Spanish scholars have reported that 18,000 words were used in Cervantes' work. The number of words used in the works of our great ancestor Alisher Navoi is more than 26,000. [6]

Therefore, one of the urgent tasks in educating today's young generation is to raise their oriental moral qualities, which is the culture of reading.
